Chapter 50: The Gift of Invisibility

The realms under the protection of the Divine Triad were vast and ever-expanding, and as the Apostles of God, Dark Apostles, Heavenly Soldiers, Shadow Lords, and Fiery Dragon Lords continued their duties across the multiverse, it became increasingly apparent that they required a means to move undetected. Their roles as governors and protectors of the realms often required them to carry out tasks in the shadows, away from prying eyes that might disrupt their delicate work.

Recognizing the importance of this need, the Divine Triad decided to grant their loyal forces a new power—Invisibility. This ability, forged from the divine and shadow-infused energies of the Triad, was far beyond simple cloaking techniques. It was a fundamental shift in the very essence of their beings, allowing them to blend seamlessly into their surroundings and remain undetectable to any form of life or power, regardless of how advanced or attuned their senses were.

Invisibility was not just a visual concealment; it was a complete erasure of presence. The Apostles of God, Dark Apostles, Heavenly Soldiers, Shadow Lords, and Fiery Dragon Lords could now move through the realms, interacting with the environment and executing their duties without fear of interruption or discovery. This new ability made them ethereal, slipping between dimensions and moving like whispers in the wind, unseen and unheard, unless they chose otherwise.

For the Apostles of God and the Dark Apostles, this power gave them the ability to observe the multiverse's inhabitants without being detected, allowing them to track the movements of hostile entities, monitor the balance of worlds, and ensure the Divine Triad's influence was felt where it was needed most. They could now carry out their roles as overseers of the Planets of Apostles and Planets of the Heavenly Soldiers without the risk of alarming other beings or interfering with the natural progression of their assigned realms.

The Heavenly Soldiers now had an even greater advantage in carrying out covert operations. As the primary defenders of the Sung Clan and other allied forces, they could move within the shadows of the Absolute Realm Universe, protect key locations, and engage in strategic operations without revealing their positions to any potential threats. They were guardians, but now they could act with the added power of secrecy, ensuring that their presence was felt only when necessary.

The Shadow Lords, always at the forefront of Sung Jin-Woo's shadow armies, were now capable of moving through the realms with complete autonomy, creating and commanding their own shadow forces without the risk of being disrupted by other factions. Their ability to remain unseen allowed them to manipulate the forces of the multiverse and ensure the Shadowverse remained secure from external threats. With their new ability, the Shadow Lords could lead from the shadows, remaining undetected until the perfect moment to strike or intervene.

The Fiery Dragon Lords, the fiery dragon shadow soldiers of Sung Su-Ho, now had the ability to move unseen across the fiery depths of Draconis Lux or the infinite expanses of Drakarion and beyond. With their immense power and dragon hearts, their new invisibility ability enhanced their tactical advantage, allowing them to silently safeguard the Dragonkin and Fiery Dragon Lords and perform covert operations to protect their kin. Whether in the vast Shadow Nebula or within the depths of the Obsidian Void, they could now act without fear of detection.

This newfound power was essential for the smooth execution of their duties, and it allowed the Apostles of God, Dark Apostles, Heavenly Soldiers, Shadow Lords, and Fiery Dragon Lords to move with greater precision and care in the delicate balance of the multiverse. They were no longer bound by the limitations of their former visibility; they were free to act, observe, and intervene when and where needed without fear of exposure.

As the Divine Triad watched over their loyal forces, they knew this gift of invisibility would be a key asset in maintaining order across the realms. Their forces were now more powerful and efficient than ever before, able to carry out their duties with a sense of stealth and precision that only beings of their caliber could possess.

The Divine Triad’s forces, now able to blend into the very fabric of reality itself, had become true masters of their respective realms. Their new ability granted them an unparalleled advantage in ensuring the continued safety, balance, and prosperity of the multiverse.
